

I just would like to add that the Do Not Call list has favorably affected my family life; I do not want to be interrupted by phone calls from pushy telemarketers while I am trying to spend quality time with my family. This list has been a blessing and I believe it would be a detriment towards that time shared by families who connect during specific hours if the laws governing this list were changed in any way. If I want to spend money for a particular service, I am able to research that information and inquire to the providers directly. I do not need to be solicited at my home at any time of the day or night.
